Q: How to get more than three fields in a query in postgres

I have a table with name name_info. One field called user_id. This field have value like 1, 2, 10, 9, 4 and 4. Now, I want to get all values under the user_id field to the postgresql database. So, how do i make that it shows and displays all the three value: 1, 2, 10, 9, 4 and 4 under the user_id field under the table name? I am using postgresql, php. I am using: `$query = pg_query($connection, "SELECT * from name_info where name_id=2");` for get all the values under the `user_id` field. I am using a for loop in php. How do i make it with three values?

A: If you want the whole row, use `SELECT *` from table; If you only want the first three fields, use `LIMIT 3, 1`; Q: Converting raw computer FFTs into human readable waveforms? I'm using open source software (FFTW) to do a raw FFT. I'd like to convert the results into waveforms - to view them on screen. I can load a single XChannel into my C# app via WAV file, but I'd like to be able to view multiple XChannels on screen at once - as this is what my application is for. Is there a way to convert these raw FFTs into a normal waveform? Ideally, I'd like to use a format like .wav, since it's easy to play and normal computer audio formats like .ogg, .mp3, etc do not provide the information I need. A: Since

FFT takes discrete frequencies by definition, the only way you can get your results in Wave format is to zoom in to the frequency range of interest. This means that you
