PowerISO 6.1.7: Another thing you can try: Turn off Windows Defender / Malwarebytes Antivirus / Spyware Guard / another antispyware, etc. Reboot Run a scan in a Windows 7 virtual machine (e.g. VirtualBox) with a clean Windows (which you created yourself, by default, Windows 7 Developer), then see if the malware still appears in there (if they're running dual-boot, there will be a clean Windows 7 install as well). If you find, after all these steps, that your AV software still has a problem with the program, boot into Windows (you will have to re-enable online updates, for instance, and enable booting up into Safe Mode) and disable the security software. Update: the last option is the most effective, as you're not wasting any time. I hope this helps you.
