They emphasize on some aspects of the pre- and intra-operative management: an preoperative diagnosis was done by sonography during the puerperal period; an intra-operative diagnosis was easily made after the disruption of the pancreas head and before the dissection of the arterial arch: the pancreatic transection always has to be performed very carefully, and the pancreatic ducts have to be cut at the end of the procedure; the postoperative course is facilitated by a careful wound management: a daily sub-fascial drain is necessary in case of a full thickness wound, and a needle with an extension should be inserted in case of a peritoneal effusion; the authors insist on the necessity of a post-
