Though the telehealth industry is still in its relative infancy, it's anticipated to grow into one of the country's fastest-growing industries by 2030, according to a new report out of the University of Minnesota's Center for Healthcare Value. More than half of those currently working for a private-sector employer could be employed in a health-related profession by 2030, including pharmacists, nurses, physicians, and "health informaticists," says the report. Medicine is projected to remain the most common career path for future healthcare 3e33713323
