Syncro SVN Client

Synchronizer for SVN is a lightweight Mac application which allows Mac users to share documents and code via the SourceForge revision control systems (SVN, CVS, Subversion, etc). It offers full SVN support: checkout, export, import, copy, mkdir, rename, branch, tag and delete. You can browse repositories, check for changes, commit changes, update your working copy, examine the revision history in tabular form or as a revision graph, view the svn annotations, integrate it with bug tracking tools. Also you can examine the changes after a synchronize operation for text files or image files in a Compare View or see the differences between two revisions of a folder. Synchronizer for SVN allows you to solve SVN conflicts easily using the visual editing feature. It can copy files while resolving conflicts and then update files with the changes. There is no need to install separate applications like a Subversion command line client or a file compare tool. Mereka tanggal dianggap beracun dan untuk dilakukan dgn kartu lusin. A: Very useful in what it does, however you're mixing this with what most of us are familiar with now... The VisualSVNIntegration.com Free VisualSVN Server Software What you're looking for is the VisualSVN. This was a free community created tool that aimed to make the workings of checking out, updating, committing and checking in to SVN (and actually doing it in a non-trivial way) 'easy and wonderful'. It focused on the user interface side of the process, allowing all interactions to be done visually rather than using the command line. The nice thing was it was also free to use and was well worth it's weight in gold if you have more than one person working on a single repository. I'd imagine this is a great tool for small/medium sized teams. A: I find that the Visual SVN Client is very good. Visual SVN Client: It has an unlimited number of team members. If you have a big team, you can import an unlimited number of projects from a csv file and they can all synchronize. My company runs 2 parallel branches that sync every 5 minutes.
