ActivateMcAfee Password Kinesio Taping Position: In this position, you apply a thin tape (glued to fabric on one side, or not) to the back of a limb, stopping at least an inch from the outer edge of the muscle group. You hold the tape in place as you stretch the muscle to ensure the muscle is held taut, and then you cut the tape at the end of the stretch. You can repeat the procedure for a series of muscles, or you can taper the tape by stretching it wider and wider on the top of a limb to provide a tape and stretch for the entire limb, such as the back of a leg. What to Expect: You will feel some tightness in the skin. This will occur when you apply the tape and cut it at the end of the stretch. Just be sure to stretch the muscle before using the tape. This is beneficial to improving the circulation and elasticity of the muscle, and to making a more effective tape. What to Wear: Taping requires a little elbow grease, so a comfortable shirt (nothing tight, please) is best. How to do it: Start by stretching the muscle to be taped. The tape should be applied to the skin, leaving about 1 inch before the edge of the muscle. Gently stretch the taped muscle, pulling the tape with it as it stretches. At the end of the stretch, cut the tape to make sure the muscle is kept taut. The taping is a great way to get around yoga's tricky enough poses.You just need to be pretty comfortable with both poses and taping techniques.Not only can you use it to do a few additional poses, but it makes yoga easier for those who need 09e8f5149f
