Husn al-hikmah aslakam fiqh muliyyin e khilaf el-salaf wal-salih, Hadith al-sahabi (Bab 3, n.a. e.c.) and hadith al-baghdadi (Bab 4, n.a.e.c.). He established the Salaf creed, which formed the basis of Sunni Hanbali theology as well as Sunni theological discourses for nearly a millennium. He is one of the four marifah (prophet teachers) of the Sunni branch of Islam (Shia must accept the first three) His views on the Koran were accepted by early marifah and widely accepted by the Hanbali school before it was superseded by Imam Shaf'i and Imam Ahmad ibn Hanbal. His hanafi and maliki school opinions were similar but at times differed in opinion with others. In particular, he believed that belief in the existence of ghadab (the hidden attributes) of God was important while he did not consider qadr (magnitude) or qiblah (direction) to be important. His view of the mursal Quran was based on disagreement with Imam Abu Hanifah and Imam Malik concerning the number of verses in the Quran, and whether the Quran is complete and infallible. Al-Sha'rani was one of the first to argue that it was authentic and that Allah speaks directly to people, a view which Malik took pains to refute. He argued that Allah is everywhere and everywhere is safe from us, which involves lying low and with his other theological ideas is reminiscent of certain Brah
