Command Conquer 4: Tiberian Twilight is a computer game in the RTS genre, the sequel to the Command Conquer series. The game was developed by EA Los Angeles and was released in 2008. The game is based on the previous part of the series, Command Conquer: Renegade, which was also developed and released by EA Los Angeles, and is its reboot. The game is set in the year 2047, four years after humanity began an all-out nuclear war using chemical and biological weapons. The game world consists of six large islands (which can be manually modified) and several smaller ones. The islands contain cities where the inhabitants live and the fighting takes place. On each of the islands you can find one of three factions: Amarr, Erangar and the Empire. These three factions are at war with each other and there is constant warfare between them. At the beginning of the game, the player is asked to choose which country to play as throughout the game and to customize his appearance. The player controls the player (or computer) on a three-dimensional world map. The player chooses the number of moves he must make per turn. At the beginning of the game the player has four points at which he can make a jump. If the player cannot make a jump, he is considered defeated. At the beginning of the game the player has one set of weapons that he can use on his turn. The weapons consist of several types of weapons, each with different characteristics and actions that use them. This gives the player more choice in which weapon to use and the best move to win. At the beginning of the game, the weapons and players' moves are copied into game memory. This is done to ensure that all players have the same weapons and the same number of moves. At the beginning of the game, the initial order of moves is chosen, and then the player makes one move.

After a move, the next round begins Moves A player makes one move per round. Each turn is used to determine the position in which the player will play.
