All Rights Reserved.Q: How do I properly round a number? If I have the number 35.69927 and I want to round it to 35.71, is it just: var num = 35.69927; num = Math.Round(num, 1); or am I supposed to convert it to a double or something first? A: I believe the problem you have is that you just cast the variable in your assignment, which makes it an int. You need to cast it as a double first: var num = (double)35.69927; If you had to use a double, you could use something like this: var num = Math.Round((double)35.69927); A: Math.Round rounds to the nearest multiple of 1/100,000. Multiply your number by 100,000 first, then round. /Y0=360) to an arbitrary altitude, a height of the device of the type (1) above the tape (T1/Y0=0) is changed to the height of the tape (T1/Y0=0), and then the device can read the tape (T1/Y0=0). As the device of the type (1) has a function of generating a carrier wave of a fixed frequency, while the device of the type (2) has a function of generating a signal having a frequency variable according to an inputted signal, while the device of the type (3) has a function of generating a carrier wave, the device of the type (3) is able to accurately detect the tape 3e33713323
