New ‘Trusted Player’ statistical insights New Trusted Player (T.P.) system brings significant new insight into key player performance in-game. After collecting data from over 2,000 matches, FIFA 22 introduces a new “Trusted Player” statistic on the Stats menu. This visual and analytical representation of game impact offers a greater understanding of the qualities possessed by top players in a match. The Trusted Player feature has been developed to represent a single player’s performance throughout the full match – a first for FIFA. T.P. is the first way for players to analyse and discover which of their abilities are most often required in a match. The new T.P. overlay also brings a deeper understanding of a player’s total performance in-game. “Trusted Player” has been designed as a key performance tool to help identify elite players across different game modes and showcase their consistent high level of performance in a match. It can be used to assess a player’s general performance, highlighting both his strengths and weaknesses. FIFA 22 developers have explored the numerous ways T.P. can be used by players in the game. Initially, the T.P. will be available to reveal a player’s most common methods of scoring and assist, as well as looking at their most critical moments and chances, like scoring a goal, creating a goal or committing an error. Developed to provide an accurate overview of a player’s performance, T.P. is applicable to players from an entire side across match types, as well as to individual players playing in different roles or using different playing techniques. New positioning icon A new positioning icon now features on the HUD. This gives direct feedback to the player about where they are on the pitch, by enabling quick identification of your team position in the key “X-Y” game view and “Team Control” map view. Better off-ball intelligence Players are able to make better decisions when playing the ball with a new midfield indicator. The new system allows for better off-ball information to be given to the player, with clearer vision of players playing in front of their team, as well as information about players nearby who can be used to play through the middle.
