It was established in 1921 by a group of prominent Bulgarian scientists, who played a significant role in the country's independence from Ottoman rule. The university's facilities include: three faculties, two institutes, six departments, numerous laboratories, two libraries, a museum, an archive and two campuses, in the capital Sofia, and in the town of Pleven. The university has two research centers, the Maria Sharapova Center of Biomedical Chemistry (KMAB) and the Institute of Cellular and Molecular Pharmacology (ICMP). Since 1931, there are more than 50,000 students enrolled at the university. History Sofia University was created as a national scientific university in 1921 by the efforts of the National Council. The first academic degree awarded by the university was a doctorate in honor of Alexander Stambulchkov. During the First World War the university was occupied by Turkish troops, which led to the closure of the university for over two years. Diarrheal disease is the second leading cause of morbidity and mortality among children under 5 years of age worldwide. A great increase in the number of rotavirus infections in Africa has been reported in recent years. To better understand the human rotavirus epidemiology in Mali, the VP7 and VP4 gene sequences of G1, G3, G4, G9 and G12 strains were analyzed. A total of 63 G1, 4 G3 and 1 G4 strains were collected from children with acute gastroenteritis during the period of 2007-2011. Most strains belonged to G1P[8] (41/63, 66.1%) and G3P[8] (3/4, 75%) genotypes, and comprised G1.1 (n = 32, 51.3%), G1.3 (n = 19, 30.2%), G1.4 (n = 5, 7.9%) and G1.6 (n = 2, 3.2%) G types. Regarding G4 strains, the G4P[6] (n = 1, 50%) and G4P[4] (n = 1, 50%) genotypes were detected. The VP7 nucleotide sequences did not show any clear evidence of intergenogroup reassortment, but analysis of the VP4 gene revealed several nonsynonymous substitutions. Phylogenetic analysis of the VP7 and VP4 genes of Mali strains revealed several previously unreported human rotavirus lineages within each of the genotypes G1P[8], G3P[8] and G4P[6]. Our data revealed that G1, G3 and G4 strains are circulating in Mali and the reassortment genotypes identified differ from those known to be predominant in the Americas.Q
