LCD Sports American Football is inspired by our love for sports games, portable gaming, and the arcade experience. Choose from American Football, Soccer, Hockey, Tennis, Track & Field, Baseball, Basketball, or Golf and live the history of the 80's and 90's. Compete against your friends and family, or play offline against the AI. Feel the excitement of the historic American sports and relive those times by putting yourself back in high school, college, or wherever you were when these teams were dominating the games. Game play is simple and addicting - play offense or defense, choose the position you want to play, earn points and points in-turn will determine who wins and advances to the next level. Be strategic. Create the strategy that will give your team the best chance for a big play - or a sure-fire loss. We've even included a game mode that even your most casual of gamers may enjoy playing and leaving him wondering about the other modes of the game. Our goal is to recreate the classic pocket games that might have been found in arcades or popular at your local pizza parlor. We had a lot of fun putting this together and hope you'll enjoy it. Links Game Info: The game takes place in a town built on volcanic soil. Over time, the town has developed into a major shipping center and a center for the gaming industry. At the dawn of the new century, the arrival of a couple of worldwide computer companies led to an unprecedented development and technological revolution. As the third generation of computer engineers and technologists entered the workforce, their lifestyles were started to change, and the gaming industry rapidly grew to be the largest industry in the country. One of the winners in that growth was a game developer called Midas LLC. Their commercial game Midas Fields was a huge success and was soon adapted to the 3D screen in the form of Midas Fields 3D. Now it is time for this game to come out on modern handheld platforms. Midas 3D was developed by NovoKontrol. What's new in LCD Sports: American Football:

IMMEDIATELY after Chuck Knoblauch blew out his knee during his first Opening Day start, I bid him farewell as part of an 11-man parade, stripping the right field flag down from its pole and racking it up into the infield to donate to Knoblauch's wife, Joanie, who would honor the show at the annual Little League Classic in West Hartford, Conn. The 79-year-old Knoblauch, a National League Rookie of the Year awardee in 1969 and a World Series MVP, was the last surviving Knoblauch, the original man with the odd S for all he was worth — a severe-damaged knuckleballer, a constant crybaby of sorts, prone to sinus cavities, the first man to use facial sunblocks, the King of the GIF, the game's preeminent surrogate of Howard Cosell, the man whose package I ripped apart more than once to win the Little League derby. Indeed, as moments and years go, this last Knoblauch, whom I did not yet know as I stripped his home-field gustatory holiday from the classic, has been about as valuable to the world. "I thought it was an incredible gesture," Knoblauch said in a telephone interview this week. "I thought I still had a lot to give and I wanted to make sure Joanie felt like she still had her stuff. "To me, it was a message to the fans," said Knoblauch, who had to be carted off the field from a batter's stall in the Yankees' fifth game. "They expected way too much, but I did everything I could to try and get ready for the season. They should have heard things from me." Ten games into the season — from when Knoblauch was sacked — he is unemployable, a player scorned, a man sadly in need of career retirement. Knoblauch spoke largely in the third person about 2009. “I had a knee problem last season and I would have done anything I could to try and get back there. But with all the new rules, when you get 20, 25 out, out of it, it’s difficult to get back.” The Yankees were quick to agree. The U.S. Men’s National Team added
