1. What is Photoshop? The Adobe Photoshop 10 tutorial shows how to create a map of Canada. The software is essentially a family of images editing applications that let you modify and combine photographs, graphics, and other media. Photoshop is designed to merge, blend, and manipulate raster images in order to create and alter them into new images. Photoshop is both a display and a layer-based software application. This means that the applications are built to work with the arrangement and management of layers. You can create, arrange, and name layers. Layers serve as individual containers for your images. You can apply new effects and edit individual elements to your layers. You can layer background images, graphics, effects, and text to one image. It is even possible to create layers that contain text. You can use these layers to create a new text document. This is a very convenient and useful feature that extends the use of Photoshop.

2. Basic Photoshop Explained The individual tools that Photoshop has to offer can be used for anything from altering color, adding special effects, and arranging multiple elements into a new composition. Photoshop Elements is designed with a simplified user interface for beginners. It is a complete package of programs that include Adobe Photoshop and Adobe Photoshop Elements 8. The Elements package contains all the tools found in Photoshop. It is much easier to use, however, as it is designed to work like a camera, only with pixels. The tools in Photoshop are grouped into different tabs. So, users can easily change the tools on-screen and group them by function. The first tab groups the tools necessary for creating, editing, and modifying your photographs. It contains the tools that are most relevant to creating and editing photographs. You can add the tools onto layers by clicking the New Layers button at the bottom. The first few tools that you can access include

3. Add Layer Select the layer you want to add the item to. Click the New Layer button at the bottom to place the item onto a new layer.

4. Blur Use the Blur tool to create a blur. You can add to the blurring by holding the shift key as you drag the Blur tool. Click to select an area that you wish to blur. Hold down the shift key when you want to blur the area to the left or right of the selected area. You can add a specific blur amount by

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Las Vegas has upgraded its information systems to make sure visitors have the best experience in the city that attracts 7 million visitors a year. The city said Thursday it is improving its computer servers, customer service and transportation by adding more computers, mobile phones and sim cards, as well as more data storage and web-based access. The aim is to make sure the system is at a level to "keep up with demand and opportunities." The city's two-year-old app on smartphones, now available in English, Mandarin Chinese, Spanish and Vietnamese, will be added to French and Korean. The city has also added new social-media sites in those languages. Visitors can get updated on things such as events, hotel openings, transportation changes and storm alerts.

Promotion In one of the biggest political moves, Prime Minister Narendra Modi announced in a live televised address that he will be addressing the nation on August 13. Modi held a meeting with the Prime Minister's Council of Advisors on Political Affairs (PMCA) which was attended by Congress Party leaders, all Cabinet Ministers and leaders of various regional parties. The big announcement was preceded by the meeting where top leaders of the BJP and top leaders of regional parties met. The meeting had a wide spectrum of discussions on various issues, including the PILs, the Privy Council, the Indian Army Chief General Bipin Rawat, and the disarray in the Opposition. While it is accepted that the BJP is quite a few seats short of an absolute majority in the house, it is difficult to predict how many seats may be needed from the opposition to form the next government. There are a lot of possibilities ranging from the previous "emergency" of 1975 to both the previous govt's seat count to the wild card with the TMC possibly coming in. The story before August 13 While the BJP already had a working majority before the Lok Sabha polls, with the alliance that it had put together with regional allies, it needed to add more seats for the credibility of its model. It needed to add to its tally on the back of seats that it inherited with the winning of the 2014 polls or through a consolidation of its seats. Both of the trends stopped after the elections ended. However, elections like 2013, when the BJP won 350 seats, are not sufficient to make the claim that they will need more than a two

Q: Why is my Python script outputting multiple instances of itself? I have a simple python script that contains: `import socket s = socket.socket(socket.AF_INET, socket.SOCK_STREAM) s.connect(("www.google.com", 80)) s.send('GET / HTTP/1.0\r Host: www.google.com\r \r ') print s.recv(4096)` Why does it give me multiple lines of output? When I run this script manually it does give me one line but when the script is ran via a launcher that is installed via the.Appimage file it seems to run in its own seperate instance of the application and gives me multiple lines of output. Anyone know why this might be happening? All I can think of is when it tries to connect to the browser in order to set up a new socket each time it is launched but I'm not sure? A: Solution: Using the NetApp Web UI, if you export an instance to.AppImage and run the app as an instance, you need to go to the Directory node and select the app image as the "instance image". Note: If a new instance is created from a.AppImage and the directory is not set as the instance image then another instance is created which receives the same directory info. Same deal if you run a.AppImage in the console.

Crossrail commuters will be able to get to and from St Pancras in almost 12 minutes under plans unveiled today. Under a new plan being considered by the Government, trains arriving from south London will be able to link with the Tube at Euston in less than 12 minutes. At present, workers travelling from south London by bus or on National Rail trains are forced to go from Euston to St Pancras, which takes 20 minutes, or struggle with delayed services. Now Transport for London (
