A: I'd say do some client-side checking to make sure the field only accepts values in a certain format, and then validate on the server-side using a tool like Google's client-side library. Read more about client-side validation here: A: The main reason to do client side validation is that you can potentially create a lot of issues using validation on the server-side, such as validation errors that can never become detected. This way, the end user gets the error results instantly, so they don't have to bother manually repairing the form field. As long as the developer has implemented a clean way of re-displaying the field, they can even just create the field with an error, and submit, to ask for user intervention. With server-side validation, you will be able to detect a range of errors which the client would never be able to, such as if the

Portrait Painter is an entertaining application that comes in handy when you want to transform your classic portrait images into handmade drawings by simply selecting the desired effect. Enhance your pictures using effects The tool is wrapped in a modern and intuitive layout, displaying the working area in the middle while on the sides you can find the filter gallery and the properties panel. The supported image formats are JPG, PNG and TIFF. Preview the filters and adjust them using the sliders To view each effect, simply click on it and the tool transforms the current picture into a piece of art. You can fit the photo to the screen, zoom in to see the details better and hide the panels. The filters come in two separate categories: portrait painter and bright/colorful. Plus, you can make the drawing's background similar to a canvas or linen. Select the brush size and painting type From the properties panel, you have the options to change the brush size and canvas/linen strength, and adjust the vibrancy, color enhance, stroke length, smooth skin and bristle strength by dragging the sliders until you're happy with how it looks. The app also offers a function that randomizes the settings. Nice features that could've been integrated It would've been a great addition if a few drawing tools were provided to use one of the effects only on specific areas, draw over the picture or insert text boxes. There are no adjustment options included, like brightness, contrast, hue or saturation to enhance or correct the photo. Approachable portrait painterAfter months of trial and error, I have finally found a solution for my problem of bad render quality. This is the same image which I posted on my blog in April (see [1], right picture on the bottom). The image looks like this (taken from my blog): Unfortunately, when I present this image in a 3D environment, it looks very bad: When I zoom in into the picture, I see that the collision meshes are overlapping. Also when I move the camera away from the model, the image looks bad. This problem is caused by the rendering problem. This is the difference between my.mesh file and the renderer's.mesh file (looks really similar): This is the.mesh file I used for the model. The.mesh file of the engine is identical: However, when I run the file through my engine, the rendering quality is perfect! The b7e8fdf5c8

If you had read yesterday's blog entry you know that it was a day of loss and tragedy and I guess it just wrapped it up because before I even woke up I felt... I just read online that Twilight is a bestseller in the US now!!! I'm so happy and relieved that I don't have to explain why I think Twilight is beautiful or smart or anything- I just want it to make the American woman happy because she now has a place to escape for a while. I hope they make...Q: Setting up Python to route mail to another SMTP server Problem: I have a python program that periodically sends an email to a user. I want to be able to send this email to another server (I will host this other server). I don't have control over the server where I want to send the email from and I want to keep this as simple as possible. Solution: I have found that I can do this by setting the smtp.set_debuglevel(True). In the python code I set the debug level and have it append it to the start of the email header, as per this: When SendMail is called, do the following: DEBUG [26/Nov/2013 05:48:12] ""

What's New In Portrait Painter?

The best navigation app for android. With Super User navigation you can easily and safely locate any Android application. Super User navigation allows you to activate and deactivate the program (app) to make it visible or invisible. In addition to simply starting or stopping a program, you can lock it, hide it, put it into standby, hangup and terminate it. With Super User navigation the process is extremely simple. All you have to do is choose the app that you want to run from the list of installed apps. Next tap on the program's icon to activate it. If you want to hide the program, tap on it to the left of the program icon. This will bring up a list of options to shut down your phone. To Start a program simply press the menu key, then choose a program. To Stop the program, press the Menu key and select the Stop option. You can also Show the list of installed apps by pressing the Menu key and select the Show Installed Apps option. CONS Super User navigation is not available for all apps. Some apps will not have a menu option to show the list of installed apps. If you cannot find the Menu key, then you cannot access the Super User navigation option. How does Super User Navigation Work? Super User Navigation works by sending a request to the server if it can start the app or not. If it can start the app, it will start it, if it cannot, it will display a list of alternatives so that you can choose from. Super User Navigation detects how many requests are made to start the app, so you will only see up to 25 icons at any one time. If you select the same icon twice, it will stop the request from being made. Super User Navigation requests permission to share the location and to start activity. It then shares your current location with the app for its functionality. It also starts the app to make it visible on your phone. Super User Navigation sends to the server once per minute to see if the app has been uninstalled and if so to stop requests being made.Q: Why and how is the `main` function of an executable file classified as 'b'? Why and how is the `main` function of an executable file classified as 'b'? I know that a "b" entry provides an entry point to a file that can be invoked. But the executable also has a name, so it can be
