Shred is a user friendly Java based tool that easily shreds your data The tool is quite easy to use you just need to give the location of file or folder and with the click of a button it shreds the file or folder. One of the interesting features of the tool is its capability of shredding files or folder with scheduling feature. Just tell the tool the number of passes you want the shredding to perform and the tool does the rest. Shred can shred both the file or folder and its free space. The tool does a good job of overwriting the file or folder with a random pattern of zeros and ones. The tool is quite intuitive to use. The tool has console mode. Shred also has the feature of Automation. You can schedule the shredding of multiple files or folders in a batch. The tool can be downloaded from The tool can be used for over 1,00,000,000 files or folders.Laser-induced breakdown spectroscopy applications for the detection of adulteration in commercial vegetables. Laser-induced breakdown spectroscopy (LIBS) was applied for the characterization of vegetables, including peppers, green peas, tomatoes, lettuce, cucumber, and brussel sprouts, to evaluate their possibility as vegetable authenticity indicators. The detection limits for Cd, Cr, Cu, Hg, Ni, Pb, V, and Zn were 15 µg kg(-1) (adsorbed concentration). The accuracy of LIBS was assessed through the analysis of a reference sample of commercially pure vegetable powders and spiked with a mixture of 4 hazardous elements (Ag, Cd, Hg, and Pb) at the concentration of 20 µg kg(-1). Recovery was calculated by comparison with a certified reference material (NIST1573a). No significant statistical differences were found among the results obtained by statistical analysis of LIBS and those of inductively coupled plasma atomic emission spectroscopy (ICP-AES) (p Biological and molecular characterization of 3D sponge cell culture in a novel 3D spherulitic

Shred is a Java-based app whose intuitive UI and user-friendly features make it all the more useful for data shredding. Shred does not rely on any third-party directory system, thereby making it easy to use and safe for your private information. Taking control over the number of passes should help you with scheduling an operation to shred sensitive documents. Shred is also handy for shredding free space at once. What people say about it I have a great piece of computer equipment in my home, and even I keep feeling nervous about its security. Well, this is one way of safeguarding it from any undesirable activity. Sure, the app may seem a little clunky, but its worth the hassle given the never-ending threats to our privacy. What's more, its user interface is quite easy to navigate, a thumb rule that makes it easy for you to know what happens with your data. You can shred your data in different ways, with you being able to choose the number of passes.Derek Bodin | May 4, 2015 The Taipan in Turin, made his debut in 2013, and enjoys a well-deserved reputation as a patient, smart and technically astute horse who can slot into most showjumping courses. Started by breeder Carlo Bottici, the stallion was originally selected by the Spanish trainer Juan Bragado and won his first competition in July 2013 at Le Pinel, France, riding a Mor XRV Star. "This was the perfect combination for me," Bottici told Equestrian News. "Our main objective was the European Championship but we also wanted him to show good skills at the most important shows. This way, he was suitable for all disciplines and also to win all competitions." The twelve-year-old has since improved on all counts, with two victories on the 2014 Supreme Novice Prix Hommage. "Derek has progressed every year," Bottici told this website, "and it is not an easy job to find a good horse. He has a special character, which is crucial to be a good showjumper. "He is a natural showjumper," added Bottici. "He has a quiet and collected character, which allows him to excel under pressure. He likes to learn a lesson and use his experience after each
