What is Photoshop? Adobe Photoshop is a world-renowned image editing software, which was created and developed by the Adobe Systems, in the year 1987. The name 'Photoshop' is a combination of the Latin root words photo and sagitta, which means a cutting tool. You may ask: Why is it called Photoshop? Adobe Photoshop is famous for its outstanding quality. The name was coined by Bill Gates to describe a category of products that revolutionized the way to enhance photographs. Photoshop provides options to effortlessly repair, enhance and manipulate images. This tool is developed to make the image editing work easier and more enjoyable. Today, Photoshop has a range of features such as Artistic filters, feature-rich editing, photo retouching, 3D creation, and advanced imaging technology. What's Photoshop for Beginners? This is the very first software that you will learn for editing photographs. Photoshop has essential elements that you will use and learn during your initial editing process. It has a simplified UI and user-friendly features. Since this app is made for beginners, so we can say that it is not as powerful or capable as the pro versions. If you aren't a Photoshop expert, and you have no idea how to use this app, you need to learn the Photoshop basics. This article will discuss each of the essential elements in this app with particular focus on beginners. Adobe Photoshop Camera RAW Editor Camera RAW is the raw form of the digital files. The camera adds a flat hue, saturation and brightness effects to the raw file. It is extremely important that you change this setting while importing or converting images. If you apply a very unappealing flat hue, the image can look very boring. When the setting is set to "Off", it means that the software will edit raw images. Most camera image processing software automatically adds these hues to the raw file. However, you can also change this setting when importing or exporting images. Camera RAW is used to view or edit images in Photoshop without 'sharpening'. Adobe Photoshop Stamps You can add multiple images to a single stamp. Once you combine all the stamp images in the stamp panel, you can remove them individually. It is important to use images that consist of a single subject. Although you can use layers, complex objects should be 05a79cecff

In the UK, many children are being put at risk by unregulated childcare, the NSPCC warns. Around 6,000 children are believed to be placed with unregulated childcare providers every year, with some of the most vulnerable having their safety at risk. In its latest Childcare Trends 2017 report, the NSPCC highlights three areas of risk for children, including the financial cost of such providers, inappropriate staff-to-child ratios and delayed reporting of abuse. The charity also warns that many parents don't realise the risks that unregulated childcare can pose to their children, despite the fact more than 3,000 people die or are injured in playgrounds every year. The NSPCC says that despite being one of the safest places for children to be, playgrounds can be a 'dreadful place' for children, who are at greater risk of being abused or neglected. NSPCC chief spokesperson Lisa Campbell says that many people are unaware of the risks that unregulated childcare poses. She says: "The reality is that children are being placed with unregulated childcare for many reasons, including financial need and having a relative who is ill and unable to look after their child. "But parents should be aware that placing a child in childcare can place them in a worrying and dangerous situation. "Young children are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect, as they can be exploited for their possessions or left alone in a quiet room. "It is also important that they spend time in regular contact with their parents or carers, especially during the first year of their life. "These children also face the risk of being exposed to domestic violence or witnessing at-risk parenting." Campbell goes on to say that the NSPCC has found that many families who take their children to unregulated childcare, do so without realising the dangers that may face their child. She says: "We also found many parents do not realise the dangers that may be posed by unregulated childcare. There is a worrying lack of awareness among many parents, even amongst those who can afford to give their children the best of everything." Some of the key findings of the NSPCC's latest report include: • More than 6,000 children, the vast majority under the age of five
