"I make my bed with neatness and order, because I think it is right; and I sit down with cleanliness and cheerfulness, because I think it is honor to the Creator in His image. I rise with joyfulness and triumph, because I think it is right to an honorable and great God that comes to those who are good and right." --Hermann HesseLittle is known about the role of Vitamin D in the regulation of tissue immunity. Previous studies have suggested that 1,25 dihydroxyvitamin D3 (1,25(OH)2D3), the hormonal form of Vitamin D, is an important suppressor of the adaptive immune response. 1,25(OH)2D3 mediates its effects on the immune response through the vitamin D receptor (VDR), which binds to specific vitamin D response elements (VDRE) within the promoter region of target genes. We are using the VDR knockout (VDR-/-) mouse to determine whether the VDR is required for 1,25(OH)2D3 to inhibit the production of interferon-gamma (IFN-gamma) by T-lymphocytes. In addition, we are examining 1,25(OH)2D3's effect on the production of interleukin-4 (IL-4). IFN-gamma and IL-4 are key cytokines involved in the regulation of immunologic responses. The identification of immunologic conditions that affect the development of autoimmunity in the VDR-/- mouse has revealed that 1,25(OH)2D3 can affect a wide variety of immune functions, which are likely to be important factors in preventing autoimmunity.
