Q: Possible to use methods from interfaces? I have a client which I don't have too much control over. That client's interface, I have no control over. The interface has a method: GetAll(ID). It returns a List. How can I call this method, and have it use my own List type? I have a method: public void ListAll(List list) { using (IQueryable myQueryable = Db.MyType.Where(m => m.ID == 1)) { foreach (MyType myType in myQueryable) { list.Add(myType); } } } I want to be able to call: ListAll(IMyType.MyTypeList); Do I need to just pass a different IList into my own ListAll? This seems kind of redundant. I know that I could, theoretically, just cast the List and then add the elements, but I am looking for the best solution. My question is: What would be the best way to go about this? A: Just use dynamic ListAll(dynamic list); }, "4": { "Nome": "", "Usuario": "", "Permissao": 1 }, "5": { "Nome": "", "Usuario": "", "Permissao": 1 } } }; const build = (data) => { return data.map(item => ({ ...item, valores: item.valores.map(valor => ({ ...valor, valores

Axillaries are anatomically located elastic ligament bundles of the fascial system connecting the chest wall to the thoracic spine. Injury to the axillaries has been known to cause significant post-traumatic morbidity and disability. In the literature, it was widely believed that injury to the axillaries cause thoracic outlet syndrome (TOS), the symptoms of which include neck pain, shoulder and back pain. Up until now, the pathophysiology of TOS remains controversial. The goal of this study was to assess the presence of any injury of the axillary system with the use of high-resolution multidetector computed tomography (MDCT) and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) in patients with suspected post-traumatic pain or neurological deficits of the upper extremities, and to relate the clinical findings with the anatomy. Twenty-six patients (17 female, 9 male) were enrolled in this prospective study. Inclusion criteria were a history of trauma at the axilla region and any of the following: (1) finding of tenderness on the axillary region in patients who had a trauma; (2) finding of nerve root compression or brachial plexus injury on MRI; (3) abnormal findings on MDCT. All patients underwent MDCT angiography of the upper and lower extremities and were evaluated clinically for the presence of symptoms and signs of TOS. MDCT and MRI findings showed that injury of the axillary system happened in seven patients, and in six, it was the only anatomical abnormality identified. Thoracic outlet syndrome was diagnosed in five of these patients. Injury of the axillary system seems to be a frequent cause of TOS. Left ventricular ejection fraction measured by myocardial scintigraphy with 99mTc-HOPIO3 in patients with idiopathic dilated cardiomyopathy. The aim of this study was to clarify the significance of the ejection fraction (EF) measured with 99mTc-HOPIO3 in patients with idiopathic dilated cardiomyopathy. We measured the EF of 75 patients with idiopathic dilated cardiomyopathy, 22 with myocardial infarction and 11 with valvular heart disease. Myocardial scintigraphy with 99mTc-HOPIO3 was performed. Myocardial clearance of 99mTc-HOPIO3 was
