A method for the measurement of the thickness of the intima of coronary arteries by histological study is described. It is based on the study of the optical density of sections cut to a thickness of 1 mm. Three sections are used: the first and second ones, cut from opposite edges of the specimen, and the third one, cut at a distance from the first and second ones, and about 1 cm above them. The values of the thickness obtained are in good agreement with those obtained by dissection and from measurements of the sections cut through the dead center of the coronary sinus.
