Last week I had to create some batch files for data backup to my network folder on a couple of PCs. In most cases it's easy, but one of the computers in question is installed with a French operating system (I'm not American) and the file system is ntfs. The OS thinks that any file in any folder is a folder itself, which we can't be happy about. What can we do? Well, we could try to convert the affected folder to a true folder with a simple command, but we are dealing with a dynamic folder, and a lot of files, and this would take a long time. Also, we can use the registry to make the folder non-folder, but how? The answer is: by converting the keys to HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Software\Classes\Folder. While we were at it, we decided to create some other folders inside our folder, because it would be weird if we were able to rename the key only, and the folder was still called File. So in our.bat files, we had something like this: @SET _FOLDER="C:\Users\Public\MYFOLDER" FOR /F "tokens=" %%A IN ('REG QUERY "%_FOLDER%" /v "Root") DO SET _FOLDER=%%A FOR /F "tokens=" %%I IN ('REG QUERY "%_FOLDER%" /v "ReparseTag") DO SET _FOLDER=%%I FOR /F "tokens=" %%A IN ('REG QUERY "%_FOLDER%" /v "SchemaId") DO SET _FOLDER=%%A FOR /F "tokens=" %%I IN ('REG QU
