When we feel stressed, our breathing becomes quicker and we may become more emotional. Stress occurs in anyone's life, and as we all get older, many of us face emotional difficulties and mental health problems that can make everyday life so much more difficult. If we don't treat stress properly, it can lead to depression and a weakened immune system. Additionally, chronic stress is linked to diabetes, heart disease and obesity. It is important to have a strategy to deal with stress. This can be done by using some of the below tips: 1) Think less about what causes your stress, and more about what you can do to reduce your stress levels. 2) Reduce the time you spend worrying about your future. 3) Spend time with family, friends and loved ones. 4) If you are worried, write down what is worrying you. Spend time writing down what you worry about and don't worry about telling anyone about your concerns. 5) Try and plan your future so that you have something to look forward to. 6) When you are out with friends and family, try and maintain a positive attitude. 7) Every time you see someone who appears to be stressed, try to make them feel relaxed. If you would like to find more ways to reduce stress, you can read our other articles on: Stress Related to Owning a Pet When you buy a pet, you will have to face a stress factor. Political unrest in Ukraine is nothing new. For centuries, the country has been home to alternately pro-Russian and pro-Ukrainian factions. This has resulted in a number of well documented civil conflicts. More recently, however, this conflict has spread to eastern Ukraine. This began in 2014 when Russia invaded the region and annexed Crimea, taking advantage of tensions in the country to place itself as a pseudo-ally to the local population. Since, the conflict has carried on and evolved. In February 2014, more than 500 people were killed in a failed secessionist coup. In response to this, Ukraine declared martial law and launched an all-out war against pro-Russian separatists. In April 2014, the rebels rejected a peace deal. This led to Russia's 2014 annexation of Crimea. Now, the situation appears to be escalating. On February 20th, Ukrainian security forces ended a 4-month operation in the Donetsk region, known as Debaltseve. The operation aimed to capture and disarm militants in order to reunite the region under Ukrainian national control. However 6d1f23a050
