The company said Thursday it had built a position in European markets, opening new offices in London, Germany and Ireland. Monotype said it was also ahead of schedule for the January launch of the second generation of its digital print services. Monotype's vice president of global marketing, David Burk, said in an interview that he expects revenues will double to $145.3 million in 2015. The company is taking a different approach than rivals including Indigo Printing Systems Ltd and PPG Industries Inc PPG.N in giving technology developers better pricing and service. Monotype's Ink is proprietary in that it is based on layers of data that customers can create. "It's a bit different than traditional print," Burk said. "It's sort of like a 2.0 type of experience. We have a direct relationship with our customers, helping them design a print campaign." One advantage of Monotype's product is its ability to handle a variety of
