In the last few months I have been writing a series of articles on the subject of working with Memory Play. In this series I have covered some of the concepts of Interactive Memory and Memory Play from a few different perspectives such as the one suggested by Tim Sheer and Eloise Penn. This week we will look at some examples of the short video, in German, which came with the book. Police are investigating the theft of an unexpected $260,000 sculpture worth eight figures because it was made of brass and had one-of-a-kind
