The state Department of Workforce Development reported Tuesday that Wisconsin had a 6,500 job loss from April to May. That's less than the 8,000 that economists had expected. Wisconsin has lost a total of 17,000 jobs this year. However, the increase in June suggests the state job market is not deteriorating as quickly as it was initially feared. The job losses in the April-May quarter were concentrated in manufacturing and retail, while construction and education added jobs, the report said. Job losses in the professional and business services sector, where technology is more common, were also expected. Of the 2.25 million jobs in the state, about 204,000 were in manufacturing and retail, 83,000 in education and health services and 67,000 in construction and maintenance, according to the report. As of June, the state added jobs in health care and social assistance and finance and insurance, the report said. Seacoast job-cluster group recovers in Seacoast, the unemployment rate in June dropped from 11.9 percent in May to 10.6 percent, and the number of unemployed people declined from 5,000 to 4,000
