Siberian Mouse Forum

ABSTRACT: The article offers a social and political analysis of the antiterrorist campaign in Uzbekistan. The author suggests that one reason for the apparent lack of public support for the antiterrorist campaign is that local public opinion is shaped by the need to balance a range of competing and competing interests. The political conundrum is highlighted in the introduction: how to maintain stability in a conservative society with growing radicalism and violent resistance in the turbulent, postcommunist environment. Comprised of a broad discussion of the situation, the author draws on a recent personal experience of Uzbekistan to explore the antiterrorist campaign. Siberian oil catastrophe Northern Japan.
