. Yamaha Grizzly 650 ATV in Stock On Store Now! Customer Reviews JackC (1.1.3.1) on Friday, January 23, 2018 21:06. I just started learning to ride, my first one being a 2011 Yamaha Grizzly 660, I purchased this Yamaha off-road vehicle after reading a lot of good reviews, it has turned out to be a great machine. I still haven't gotten used to how quiet it is, unless of course, I'm driving over a bunch of rocks, then there is no more silence, it's a loud rumbling. I'm having a real blast riding this machine. It's not my first ATV or even off-road vehicle, but the Grizzly is my first Yamaha. I've only owned it for a few weeks and am having so much fun. The motor powers up right away without hassles and the learning is quick, it's pretty easy to get on and off the machine, there's no surprises, no issues. There is plenty of room in the cab for all of your gear, and I do like the fact that the Yamaha's has a side stand, in the past, I would ride the machine over a small rise, and all of a sudden, the side stand would slide out of the way, this was an annoying thing to deal with, and something that could make the machine tip over. I hope to get many years of enjoyment out of this machine. I purchased the factory extended warranty, and took advantage of the warranty registration, all that is left is to hang on for a few years and it will be mine forever. I highly recommend Yamaha! Nate (1.1.4) on Friday, September 29, 2017 14:35. I've had this machine a little over a month now, and so far, I am really loving it. However, there are some things I would like to see improved. The first is the ergonomics. I feel like the seat was too comfortable for my butt. There was a bit of too much give, I could kind of relax my torso and it wasn't uncomfortable. There was also no adjustment for back and forth. It just sat on my back. The other thing I noticed is the hand controls, the speed control, wasn't exactly perfect. It was kind of hard for my index finger to adjust the RPMs, I had to use my pinky instead. I could live with it, but it c6a93da74d
