i used to use acronis true image to backup my notebook and it has worked flawlessly. i currently have a 750gb western digital hard drive and it is in a case. i wanted to replace the hard drive with a new nvme drive and it's gone to hell. i am getting the following error message when i try to backup my drive: "can not create a full backup, the volume is not ready yet" hi steve it is a dell vostro 15. i have a western digital 640gb nvme drive that i want to install. i have an i7-6700k and 16gb of ram. i have never had any issues with acronis on any of my previous laptops. this one has been a pain. i get the following message when i try to install the drive: "can not create a full backup, the volume is not ready yet" i have tried to install it in several different ways and it fails every time. is there any way to fix this issue? i'm running windows 10 pro. i bought a western digital 640gb ssd and was told that my computer could use it. i put it in and get the message "this hardware device is not working correctly" i reinstalled windows and tried to get the western digital drive to work. i had problems with the registry. i fixed that and got the western digital drive to work, however, i can't backup to it. i'm getting the following message when i try to backup: "can not create a full backup, the volume is not ready yet" i'm using the acronis true image application on a windows 10 machine. i have been using acronis true image for some time. i have a western digital, 400gb sata drive that i want to install. i have an i7-6700k and 16gb of ram. i've had no issues with acronis on my previous laptops. this one seems to be having issues. i get the following message when i try to install the drive: "can not create a full backup, the volume is not ready yet" i have tried to install it in several different ways and it fails every time. is there any way to fix this issue? with the contents on the hard drive but sometimes it freezes while browsing. but it never gets into an action because it freezes after the 3rd or 4th screen. does not appear to be dependent on which menu (left side or top) is selected. nope. it doesn't even get to the restore screen. i have tried it both ways, windows only and uefi with esx pre-boot (uefi boots esx on first hard drive priority). it's not a install/recovery issue, because the install works fine on uefi with esx pre-boot. i will try it with a brand new hard drive, and a 1tb drive instead. however, don't think a newer drive will have a difference. also tried booting from a full drive image. the 2nd disk is empty, but the system is still able to boot into the 2nd disk. i will try a 3rd party boot manager, also. 5ec8ef588b
