cody vansickle (cody@vc.wustl.edu) i was able to decipher the patch (i think), and then i ran it, and it didn't work. but i did manage to figure out the patch was doing a bunch of checks to see if the host name contains ".google.com", and the way it was checking was a bit different than what you would expect. for example, it was checking if the host name was "www.com", which is what you would expect, but it was checking if it was ".com", or something else (maybe a subdomain?). so after some other tweaking, i was able to get it working. now, it's still missing the fact that it's not doing all the checks that it should, but it's working. here's the patch (saved as a file on my server), and the results of running it:
