Q: MySQL: how to do one to many join I have 3 tables user ----- id (int) name (varchar) age (int) score ----- id (int) name (varchar) score (int) user_score ----- id (int) user_id (int) score (int) I want to do one to many join. How can I do it? Can you give me sample code? A: SELECT a.*, b.score, c.score, d.score FROM user a JOIN user_score b ON a.id = b.user_id JOIN score c ON b.score = c.id JOIN score d ON c.id = d.id A: It sounds like you want a self-join: select * from user join user_score usr on user.id = usr.user_id join score s on s.id = usr.score This returns a table with every user's scores. Note that this does not perform a join with the scores table (which is what you wanted) - that was performed earlier by the JOIN. So, this method also won't show you the scores for any given user unless they have at least one score in the scores table. A: SELECT a.*, b.score, c.score, d.score FROM
