In this study, we present a patient with multiple myeloma, who underwent repeated vertebral dens fractures. We have an osteolytic lesion of the body of the second lumbar vertebra with an extensive cortical perforation. A surgical treatment was performed with no favorable outcome. These lesions were evaluated with histopathologic examination and bone densitometry studies in the past. A literature review was also performed for these types of lesions. The seven serologic tests for syphilis currently recommended by the CDC for medical evaluation and treating of patients are: Venereal Disease Research Laboratory (VDRL); fluorescent treponemal antibody absorption (FTA-ABS); enzyme immunoassay for specific IgM antibodies (EIA-M); and/or specific IgG antibodies (EIA-G) or for early IgM antibodies (EIA-M); the T. pallidum particle agglutination test (TP-PA); and the rapid plasma regain test (RPR). A major problem with these tests is that many syphilis patients are misdiagnosed. Routine tests such as VDRL or FTA-ABS test may be negative in many cases and/or cannot distinguish syphilis from a secondary immunologic response to a treponemal infection (such as gonococcal infection). With regard to the rapid tests, there is little evidence that they will help the diagnosis. TP-PA will only be positive in patients with primary and secondary syphilis; however, it does not differentiate between these two forms. In addition, the literature on the diagnosis of syphilis in pregnancy is poor; however, it is clear that syphilis is an important cause of stillbirth, neonatal mortality, and early fetal loss. 04aeff104c
