[solved] Hello, I've downloaded Vectorscribe 2.3.1 from cnet, tried to unzip it, got this error "application not supported by this version of Mac OS". Can someone help me? A: I solved it: I've downloaded Vectorscribe 2.3.1 from official site, and trying to run it, got a message "can't read macintosh HD", after I click OK, it just worked fine. I don't know whether there is some odd problem of the trial version, or what. Anyway, if you are facing the same problem and having a trial version of Vectorscribe, please try to run the "setup.zip" in another environment, with a bigger size partition. I don't think this season ticket you get for free will apply, though. I went to that Soho place the other week after we had gone to the "in" London cinema to see a film, and there was the usual CBR flummery going on. But I was thinking of getting a season ticket next year, and since I'll be living here permanently, as well as working...what price would you go for? I haven't been but it certainly doesn't look that great. The windows with the lights on will be all boarded up but I doubt they'll be up to much in terms of cleaning and they are probably gonna replace a few of them first before doing anything else. I am inclined to think it is a slightly better idea than the sea of empty shops I am constantly plagued with during the day. Well, the man who wrote that was a hooligan, if anything. He is a complete right winger, and has a leaning towards both the BNP and EDL as my fellow coppers found out recently. Some of the stuff he writes is truly scary and full of extreme racist language. If it is right he is a bigoted idiot, I have no idea why he was doing it. Probably a mix of both. A lot of them are the stereotypical loutish yobbo who hates anything connected to anything established and as part of that thinks that anything tied to the established order must be up to no good. A lot of them
